TULSA
Association of Petroleum Landmen

Letter From the President

Dear Members,

I would like to thank all of the members who attended our March Dinner Meeting this past Monday. We had a great turnout for a truly remarkable speaker. For those of you who missed the event, Congressman Jim Bridenstine of Oklahoma's 1st congressional district gave us an outstanding insider view of politics in Washington D.C., along with the issues that are currently affecting our state and nation. The bulk of Congressman Bridenstine's speech consisted of an intriguing Q&A session, which comprised of great participation by the audience that led to a very informative event covering many interesting topics.

For those of you who are compiling AAPL CE credits, TAPL has gone digital. To find our most recent continuing education credits, please visit our homepage at www.tapl.org. Then click on the "Join Us At An Event" tab near the top of the homepage. Then click on "AAPL CE Credits" toward the bottom of the page. This page will list all available affidavits for the current year. If you'd like to skip the above described steps, then simply go to www.tapl.org/aapl-ce-credits. Regarding upcoming events, the Spring Educational Seminar and Spring Golf Scramble are right around the corner. This year's seminar will be held on Thursday, April 22nd at the OU Schusterman Center. If your company is interested in sponsoring the event, please contact Stephen McNamara Jr. at smcnamara@cceok.com. Our spring golf tournament will once again be at Indian Springs Country Club on Monday, May 11th. Sponsorship opportunities ranging from sponsoring a hole to being a gold sponsor are still available, so please contact us at taplgolf@gmail.com if you would like to participate. Registration will open up for both of these events soon, so please be on the lookout for an email from TAPL regarding the aforementioned. As we all know, the golf tournament fills up fast, so you may want to consider organizing your teams now to avoid any delays.

Finally, the TAPL Nominating Committee is in the midst of determining this year's list of nominees for the upcoming Board of Directors election. I encourage you to put careful thought and consideration into whom you give your vote. As always, we will have a slew of great candidates to choose from, so please take the time to vote. Thank you in advance for your help and participation.

Sincerely,

Collin J. Sniff, CPL
TAPL President

TAPL Volunteer Event

Thank you to all 31 participants (including Payton Epps, Dillon Eden, Cierra Hughes, and Elaine Schillinger, being students from the Tulsa University mentoring group) for volunteering your time and working at the Eastern Oklahoma FoodBank on Friday, March 6, 2015. Collectively we packaged 3400 pounds of food which equals food for 1088 kids backpacks, all of which fit in 36 boxes and required 6 pallets to move. Also special thanks to committee members Scott Peterson, Jeff Myers and Kevin Meeks for all your help! A great time was had by all.

Another job well done, TAPL!

Thanks again,

Mike Knapp

Get Ready for More Oil Deals

(Bloomberg) -- A decision by Whiting Petroleum Corp., the largest producer in North Dakota's Bakken shale basin, to put itself up for sale looks to be the first tremor in a potential wave of consolidation as $50-a-barrel prices undercut companies with heavy debt and high costs.

For the first time since wildcatters such as Harold Hamm of Continental Resources Inc. began extracting significant amounts of oil from shale formations, acquisition prospects from Texas to the Great Plains are looking less expensive.

Buyers are ultimately after reserves, the amount of oil a company has in the ground based on its drilling acreage. The value of about 75 shale-focused U.S. producers based on their reserves fell by a median of 25 percent by the end of 2014 compared to 2013, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. That's opening up new opportunities for bigger companies with a better handle on their debt, said William Arnold, a former executive at Royal Dutch Shell Plc.

"In this market, there are whales and there are fishes, and the whales are well armed," said Arnold, who also worked as an energy-industry banker and now teaches at Rice University in Houston. "There are some very vulnerable little fishes out there trying to survive any way they can."

Smaller producers with significant debt that depend on higher prices to make money are the most likely early targets for buyers such as Exxon Mobil Corp. or Chevron Corp., companies that have bided their time for years as the value of some shale fields soared to $38,000 an acre from $450 just a few years earlier.

"Consolidation Game"

The market crash is creating "a consolidation game," Concho Resources Inc. Chief Executive Officer Timothy Leach said on a Feb. 26 call with investors. "It's harder to be a small company today than it has been in the past."

In the pre-plunge days, acquisitions were dominated by foreign buyers overpaying to get a seat at the shale boom table. That buying frenzy was followed by an explosion in asset sales as companies pieced together their ideal drilling portfolios. Joint ventures were a popular way of funding what seemed like an unstoppable drilling machine.

Now, an expected surge of deals is more likely to feature fire sales by companies unable to pay expenses, falling asset prices and a widening division between the haves and have-nots.

Heavy Debt

Sellers will be companies like Whiting, handicapped by heavy debt and lacking the cash reserves or hedging contracts that would have provided some insulation from the market crash. Among the three biggest producers in North Dakota -- Whiting, Continental and Oasis Petroleum Inc. -- the value per-barrel of reserves has fallen by about half since June, the data show, meaning those reserves would cost a buyer half what they were worth eight months ago.

Exxon is the only major oil company with a AAA credit rating, which gives it unparalleled borrowing power for financing deals. More importantly, the company has $226 billion of its own shares stashed away from buybacks that it could use to buy other companies. That was how Exxon paid for Mobil in 1999 and XTO Energy Inc. in 2010.

Chevron holds $43 billion of its own shares in its treasury alongside $13 billion in cash, and the company has ample ability to borrow.

An analysis by Wolfe Research LLC's Paul Sankey found the likeliest takeover candidates among major U.S. and Canadian producers included Continental, Apache Corp., Devon Energy Corp. and Anadarko Petroleum Corp. Those companies are big enough to help a buyer such as Exxon gain oil reserves at a cheaper price compared to peers, Sankey wrote Feb. 2.

In the headiest days of the shale-buying spree, executives including Occidental Petroleum Corp. CEO Stephen I. Chazen swore off deal-making, saying it would be more profitable to focus on developing the assets they'd already acquired.

Now they're singing a different tune.

Eyes Open

For the first time in years, EOG Resources Inc. Chairman and CEO William R. Thomas said Feb. 25 the company was weighing larger deals to scoop up acreage at a bargain, departing from its usual preference for more incremental purchases. Exxon Chairman and CEO Rex Tillerson suggested last week at an investor presentation in New York that the global oil giant is keeping its eyes open for opportunities in the downturn.

Whiting has reached out to potential buyers including Statoil ASA about a sale, people familiar with the matter said this week. The company took on $2.2 billion in additional debt for its $6 billion acquisition last year of fellow shale producer Kodiak Oil & Gas Corp., just as crude prices had begun a decline from more than $100 a barrel to less than $50 at the start of the year.

Scaling Up

The Denver-based company would be an attractive target for Exxon, Chevron or Hess Corp., all of which have operations in North Dakota and would benefit from scaling up, according to a Bank of America Corp. note to investors Monday.

Spokesmen for Exxon, Statoil, Chevron and Hess declined to comment on their potential interest in buying shale companies. Spokesmen for Anadarko, Apache and Devon declined to comment about their interest in selling.

Buyers will probably have to use their stock to purchase smaller operators, which don't want to take cash at the bottom of the market, said Mike Bock, co-founder of energy investment bank Petrie Partners LLC of Denver. Bock spoke generally about potential energy mergers and declined to comment specifically on Whiting, as his firm has done business with the company in the past.

"Stock for Stock"

"Now is the time to do a stock-for-stock deal," Bock said. "For the most part, it's going to be unconventional players combining." Since oil company shares have fallen alongside the market crash, an equity deal allows both buyer and seller to reap the upside when shares gain in a recovery, said Tim Balombin, an energy investment banker with Wells Fargo & Co.

Whiting has fallen 54 percent since June, about the same as oil prices in that time. The Standard & Poor's 500 energy producer index has declined 33 percent, according to data compiled by Bloomberg. As oil prices have stabilized this year, Whiting has climbed 13 percent.

"The companies that have good currency in their stock are willing to deploy it aggressively," Balombin said in a telephone interview. "The best companies that come out of these downturns come out of it bigger and stronger."

SEA COMMITTEE ANNOUNCEMENT

TAPL Members,

The TAPL Scholarship, Endowment and Awards Committee is currently in the process of voting on this year's TAPL Awards. We would like to thank the membership for their numerous nominations of candidates for Landman of the Year, Rookie of the Year, Company of the Year, and Lifetime Achievement Award. The SEA Committee will be reviewing bios for the candidates, voting within the next few days, and plan to present these awards to the recipients at the April 13th dinner meeting.

The SEA Committee has also been interviewing Energy Management students at the University of Oklahoma and the University of Tulsa to determine the recipients of this year's TAPL Scholarships. Several Committee members have been involved in the difficult process of interviewing and examining several qualified candidates for these scholarships, and the Committee plans on announcing the recipients of the scholarships from both schools at the April dinner meeting.

Lastly, we would like to continue to remind the membership that we are still in the process of raising money to fund Scholarship Endowments at the Universities of Tulsa and Oklahoma. These Funds would supplement the money needed to provide scholarships indefinitely to students at both programs, at or above the level TAPL is currently awarding these scholarships. The difference however would be that the Funds would not be dependent on the yearly TAPL budget, as they currently are, and would ultimately free up those funds to be used in other areas of the organization. Donations to these great causes are tax deductible and will continue to help with funding the education of the future of our industry and organization.

There are several ways to donate to the Scholarship Endowment programs, and there will be opportunities at multiple TAPL events throughout the year, including the Spring Golf Tournament coming in May. If you would like to donate or would like more information on the Scholarship Endowment programs please contact Andy Matson (amatson@midcon-energy.com, (918) 748-3342).

Sincerely,

Andy Matson, RPL

TAPL Scholarship, Endowment & Awards Committee Vice Chair

TAPL Members,

As you know, our industry is constantly under fire from environmental groups in many cities & states across the country and AAPL is actively promoting and lobbying for our profession. Part of that goal is to stomp out misinformation that if left unaddressed can be very harmful to the progress of our industry. In the face of a dramatic legislative assault in Colorado, Anadarko Petroleum along with Noble Energy and others put together a short 40 page booklet or “toolkit” that explains some of the common practices of our industry and attempts to rectify some of the misinformation that exists amongst the general public that may not have the same exposure that we do to the good work that our industry is doing every day. This booklet is intended to serve as a tool to help those in-house and field landmen who are dealing with the public on a daily basis and it has been approved for wide circulation, so feel free to share it with your team. Approximately 10% of the material is Anadarko specific and the remaining 90% is factual science & economy based information that has been vetted and sourced by numerous organizations. AAPL has a similar “toolkit” and may dovetail this information into our own product and / or rebrand this and disseminate as an additional tool to the AAPL Membership, but until that time, the TAPL Board wanted to make it available to any of you who might be interested in using it in your day to day operations.
